Skinny Girls Don't Have OOMPH!

It takes those extra lbs. of solid flesh to "bring out" your natural curves

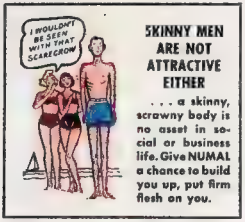
If you're otherwise healthy but skinny, scrawny, rundown and lbs. underweight, try correcting this common mistake in eating.

THERE are three essential substances that many thin, scrawny and undernourished girls may fail to get in sufficient quantity from the food they eat. These substances are Vitamin B_1, calcium phosphate and iron. If, like thousands of others, you are underweight without organic cause . . . never seem to gain a pound . . . are so thin that you look gangling and gawky from insufficient amounts of these precious elements, don't get discouraged.

You may find that by correcting this simple mistake in eating you can easily add firm solid flesh . . . extra alluring pounds that help bring out those natural eye-catching curves. A simple and easy way is to try the amazing new product called Numal that supplies, in significant amounts, the Vitamin B_1, calcium phosphate and iron needed in the daily diet. Plus a food that in itself is a great help in adding extra pounds.

Take 1 heaping teaspoonful of Numal 3 times a day. It is pleasant, assimilable and easy to take. You will get the equivalent in Vitamin B_1 content of 34 cakes of average moist baker's yeast . . . the iron equivalent of 15 pounds of tomatoes or 12½ pounds of spinach or 9 pounds of boiled beets . . . and the calcium equivalent of ⅘ths pint of fresh cow's milk, the phosphorus content of 1 glass.

Remember, if you don't get a sufficient quantity of Vitamin B_1 in your daily diet, you may suffer loss of appetite. And without sufficient iron, the element that helps build rich red blood, you may be rundown, pale, weak and listless. You need calcium phosphate for sound teeth and sturdy bones.



SKINNY MEN ARE NOT ATTRACTIVE EITHER

. . . a skinny, scrawny body is no asset in social or business life. Give NUMAL a chance to build you up, put firm flesh on you.

Numal Must Please You or No Cost

So if you are skinny, gangling and bony from lack of these precious nutrients, don't wait any longer. Get Numal today. You will want those extra pounds that "bring out" your natural eye-catching curves. Take Numal faithfully for a week. See if you can't actually feel the difference . . . gain weight and better color. If after this short period you honestly don't feel Numal has benefited you, just return the bottle for a complete refund of your money. Numal costs but a few cents a day to use.

If loss of weight persists see your doctor

TEACHER'S PET

"I knew it. I just knew it the first day I saw her with those awful glasses and braids!" Bitsey said, imitating Anna's slightly protruding teeth and minor speech defect.

"She knows everything. But absolutely everything!" Mary Lou shook her head sadly. Her exasperation with the new girl in her grade had reached the climax when Anna multiplied 4,146 by 217—in her head. "If this goes on, Miss Thatcher will think we're all morons. And think what will happen if I flunk algebra, again!" She groaned and thought of the disaster. It would mean falling behind the rest of her class, being tossed out of the sorority, and the end of the world. There would be no point in living if this should happen.

"Gr-r-r-r, I could take those braids and wrap them around her big mouth." Bitsey doubled up her fists, relishing the idea of having Anna Beck alone for just five minutes.

The next day, the whole situation was brought to a head. Miss Thatcher called on Anna to give the dates of Julius Caesar, Napoleon Bonapart, and King Richard, The Lionhearted. Anna buttoned her lip pensively for a moment, then rattled off the dates as though she were reciting the days of the week.

"Now, Bitsey," Miss Thatcher said in her scratchy high-pitched voice, "will you please give the dates of Hannibal, Augustus, Louis the Fourteenth of France, and Queen Elizabeth of England."

"Oh-h-h, Now, Miss Thatcher." Bitsey replied.

"Now." Miss Thatcher replied.

"Well, now let me see," Bitsey said slowly and looked up at the ceiling as though she expected to find it written there.

"I'm waiting, Bitsey. If you don't know, kindly say so and I'll call on someone else."

"Oh, no, Miss Thatcher. It just takes me a moment to get them all straight. Uh, now let me see, Hannibal was the guy with the elephants, wasn't he?"

One of the students guffawed at this point and Miss Thatcher tapped the ruler on the desk for order.

"Yes, Bitsey, Hannibal was the er — King who used elephants to cross the Alps. Now, when was it, if you please?"

"Well, I'm not sure, Miss Thatcher, but I think it was around Christmas time."

It took five minutes to quiet the class. Tommy Fitzhugh laughed so hard he choked and had to be carried out into the hall for some water.

Bitsey looked around at her audience with appreciation.

"Bitsey! You'll stay one hour after class and write the dates of Hannibal two hundred times," Miss Thatcher screeched above the noise of the class.

"Miss Thatcher, you can't do that!" Mary Lou bellowed. "Bitsey has to play volley ball tonight against Smith High."

"When Bitsey Matthews comes up to the high standards set in this classroom by Anna Beck, she may join you for extra-curricular activities, and not before. Class dismissed."

"Wait'll I get my hands on that character," Mary Lou whispered in Bitsey's ear as she left her writing dates on the blackboard.

Bitsey winked, and went on writing furiously.

Mary Lou cornered Anna in the hallway, took her roughly by the arm and led her out of the building.

"I want to talk to you," she said sternly. "You've ruined everything. If you don't stop showing off those brains of yours, you'll find yourself with nobody to talk to. You're just a smart aleck and nobody likes you!" Mary Lou looked disdainfully at Anna's dress that was made over, patched, and still looked dreadful. For a moment Mary Lou felt a twinge of pity, but she continued to glare at the little mouse before her relentlessly.

"I—I—don't mean to . . ." Anna's lip began trembling and her eyes filled with tears. One splattered down and made a wet spot on the front of her dress. She looked down at it and her eye widened with fear. "My dress!" he cried. "Aunt Emily will be angry if I muss my dress!" Anna wiped the tears that continued to streak down her cheeks in spite of her efforts to check them.

"Don't you live with your mother and father?" Mary Lou said hesitantly, regretting more each moment her treatment of the teacher's pet.

"No, I don't have any!" Anna sobbed. "And if you want to know, the only reason I know the answers to Miss Thatcher's question is because Aunt Emily makes me study every night and Saturday and Sunday, too!" Now weeping as though her heart would break, Anna tore herself from Mary Lou's grasp and ran across the schoolyard, down the street, and out of sight.

Mary Lou watched her as far as she could see the braids flying behind her faded blue pinafore.

That evening, Mary Lou called Bitsey.

"I've got a brainstorm," she said excitedly.

"What now?" Bitsey said skeptically, knowing Mary Lou's brainstorms usually ended up with Bitsey taking blame or punishment.

"We're going to make a glamour girl out of a miserable looking mess," she said.

"Who, me?" Bitsey returned expectantly.

"No, silly. Anna Beck—who else?"

"You've really gone buggy. I knew it was coming," Bitsey said sarcastically.

"Now listen. Tomorrow I'm asking Anna over for the week-end. Cancel all appointments. We've got to get busy. We've only got a couple of weeks."

She hung up before Bitsey could ask any more questions. Then she called Miss Emily Beck.

Anna appeared at the door that evening, scrubbed and shining.

"Aunt Emily sent me," she said shyly.

"I asked her to let you come for the week-end," Mary Lou said taking her ragged valise and pulling her inside. "Bitsey's here, too, and we have something to say to you."

Anna was directed to Mary Lou's room where Bitsey waited, speech prepared.

"We want to tell you how sorry we are that we picked on you, and we want you to be one of our very best friends," Bitsey said, flushing with embarrassment. "Whew, now that that's over, let's get something to eat."

"Bitsey thinks of nothing but food," Mary Lou whispered confidentially in Anna's ear, and for the first time in many weeks the thin, pale girl smiled.

After finishing half a chocolate cake and a quart of milk, Bitsey took Anna firmly by the shoulders and sat her down in front of Mary Lou's dressing table mirror.

"Anna, it's time for a change. And we're going to make it," Mary Lou said with determination. "There's no reason you have to be a teacher's pet and not the most popular girl in school. Look at that beautiful hair all tied up in braids. And a little lipstick can do wonders!"

"But—but what will Aunt Emily say?" Anna said, looking frightened again.

"We're going to change that, too. Don't worry about it. Bitsey, hand me that comb!"

Mary Lou unbraided Anna's hair, removed her glasses, and applied some light lipstick.

"Now, you see!" Mary Lou exclaimed.

Anna looked at herself in the mirror. She couldn't believe it was real. She smiled at her image, then at Bitsey and Mary Lou.

"Gosh, you're pretty!" Bitsey exclaimed. "Wait till the boys get a load of you!"

For the next week Anna, Bitsey, and Mary Lou were inseperable. Anna was taught how to curl her hair, use just the right kind and amount of powder and lipstick, how to dress, how to walk, how to relax and how to smile.

When Mrs. Radcliff returned from a shopping trip on the Saturday before the Sophomore Slide with a beautiful white gown for Anna, skirts, sweaters, shoes, stockings, and two coats, Anna was speechless. She wept and kept hugging Mary Lou and Bitsey and Mrs. Radcliff over and over again. Then all three of them cried, and Mrs. Radcliff dashed out of the room because she was weeping, too.

It was the following Friday afternoon and Anna still had not been asked to the Sophomore Slide. She gathered up her books sadly and dropped one on the floor. A deep voice said from behind, "Anna, here's your book. But I don't think I'll let you have it." It was Bill Marshall, captain of the football team, president of the junior class, president of his fraternity, and the handsomest boy in the whole school.

Anna flushed because he was looking straight into her eyes.

"I'm not going to give it back until after the Sophomore Slide, and you won't be needing it after that, either," he said taking all of her books under his arm and escorting her out of the room.
